

I use only satellite radio and having the local traffic really helps out; in fact, I would like to see more local travel warnings. I am extremely pleased with satellite radio and would never go back to listening to commercial inundated radio. It just does not suit me anymore, and frankly, it is annoying. I also enjoy XM for its capability to reach anywhere nationally, which is something that both FM/AM cannot do. Everyone that does not have XM is missing great quality service and a wide variety of channels to choose. I would like to see more channels, possibly even a Howard Stern type personality added to the lineup. There is no reason that I can see to block anything that XM would like to broadcast. It is a premium service, if the NAB does not like it, tough. The NAB needs to update, and get with today's America. Everyone wants things right away, and instead of searching for a local radio station that may have the traffic every 30 minutes, I can tune right into XM's traffic and weather channels that are running real time. It is more efficient and better for the roadways if everyone has access to this information to alleviate congestion on major roadways.
